Building off the argument that comics succeed as literature: rich, complex narratives filled with compelling characters interrogating the thought-provoking issues of our time. This book argues that comics are an expressive medium whose moves structural and aesthetic may be shared by literature, the visual arts, and film. But beyond this are a unique art form possessing qualities these other mediums do not. Drawing from a range of current comics scholarship demonstrating this point, this book explores the unique intelligence of comics and how they expand the ways readers engage with the world in ways different than prose or film or other visual arts. Written by teachers and scholars of comics for instructors, this book bridges research and pedagogy, providing instructors with models of critical readings around a variety of comics.

Since its inception, the Nobel Prize for Literature has given a very public voice to some of the world's greatest writers and their responses to the honor. Their acceptance speeches have often been epochal: from the famed call to arms by William Faulkner to the multicultural song of Derek Walcott from 1903's Bjørnstjerne Bjørnson to 1999's Günter Grass. This collection of 28 speeches traces the ideals of the artists and the selection committee itself. Throughout the 20th century, included are an introduction to each of the writers chosen, an abridged copy of the speech or lecture, and a bibliography of works in English.
