the malay dilemma revisited is a critical and balanced analysis of malaysia s preferential race policy and its impact on the nation s delicate race dynamics and economy unlike america s affirmative action malaysia s version is far more aggressive and pervasive and has been remarkably successful in creating a sizable and stable bumiputra indigenous group middle class the price tag is significant distortion of freemarket dynamics and consequent inefficiency perversely the policy impairs rather than strengthens bumiputras ability to compete in contrast to quotas and other set aside programs that are the hallmark of the current policy the writer presents an alternative strategy aimed primarily at enhancing bumiputra competitiveness the proposed approach would not negatively impact the economy nor interfere with the freemarket equally important it would not arouse resentment from other malaysians the first objective would be to modernize the nation s archaic educational system to emphasize english mathematics the sciences and technical training secondly the influences of religious and royal institutions must be curtailed and the rates of urbanization and population growth reduced the primary objective is in enhancing competitiveness not on meeting arbitrarily picked numerical goals and targets in malaysia race is viewed not as an external attribute attached to a person but rather as an innate characteristic starting from this foundation race and indigeneity have featured prominently in malaysian politics throughout the post war era influencing both the civil status and property rights of broad sectors of the population scientific opinion shapes malaysian thinking about the subject as do stereotypes but much of the discussion rests on concepts developed within the discipline of anthropology and by the colonial administration in a process that dates back to the early nineteenth century taming the wild examines the complex history of indigeneity and racial thought in the malay peninsula and the role played by the politics of knowledge in determining racial affinities by charting the progression of thought concerning indigenous or aboriginal people the author shows that the classifications of indigenous and malay depend on a mixture of cultural social and religious knowledge that is compressed under the heading race but differs according to the circumstances under which it is produced and the uses to which it is put by historicizing the categorization of aborigines and british engagement with aboriginal groups in malaya taming the wild situates racial knowledge within larger frames of anthropological and racial thought and highlights the persistence of nineteenth century understandings of indigeneity and malayness in racial contestations in modern malaysia
