why are people nice to each other what are the reasons for altruism matt ridley explains how the human mind has evolved a special instinct for social exchange offering a lucid and persuasive argument about the paradox of human benevolence

this catechism is divided into three parts the first part treats of faith the second of morals the third of the means of grace in the first part our lord appears in his character of teacher in the second in his character of king and in the third in his character of high priest and since this catechism proposes as its primary object to answer the question for what purpose are we here upon earth thereby emphasizing and giving prominence to man's high calling and destiny it is especially suited to the present day when the pursuit of material interests self indulgence and pleasure engrosses the attention of so many this catechism is in fact nothing more nor less than an abstract of our lord's teaching and may be called a guide book for the christian on the road to heaven preface the skillfulness of virtue provides a new framework for understanding virtue as a skill based on psychological research on self regulation and expertise matt stichter lays the foundations of his argument by bringing together theories of self regulation and skill acquisition which he then uses as grounds to discuss virtue development as a process of skill acquisition this account of virtue as skill has important implications for debates about virtue in both virtue ethics and virtue epistemology furthermore it engages seriously with criticisms of virtue theory that arise in moral psychology as psychological experiments reveal that there are many obstacles to acting and thinking well even for those with the best of intentions stichter draws on self regulation strategies and examples of deliberate practice in skill acquisition to show how we can overcome some of these obstacles and become more skillful in our moral and epistemic virtues
