this volume provides a cross national analysis of the changing identities of various national and ethnic groups their new political influence in the emergent democracies and their efforts to revive suppressed cultures it begins with a theoretical analysis of the concepts of national identity and ethnicity it features case studies of contemporary belarussian polish and ukrainian national identities before turning to a study of eastern europe s hidden ethnic minorities like the finno ugric peoples in russia the lemko s in poland and the gypsies in bulgaria modern states have evolved as complex political structures in which unitary forms of government maintain an uncertain equilibrium with ethnically plural societies historically ruling elites have tried with little success to eradicate ethnicity through genocide bury it under accusations of tribalism discredit it with the mind frame of modernization or confine it to local rather than national political arenas this broad ranging volume examines the dynamics of ethnic manipulation and accommodation by dominant and subordinate groups in the state building process ethnicity and the state reflects the widely varying political contexts and cultures in which reasons of state contend with unyielding ethnic allegiances european south american asian and middle eastern examples reveal a consistent set of themes and attitudes the authors find that while the state must realize its authority and stability through a strictly defined charter of rights and values ethnic identity exercises its power more freely and flexibly the sense of peoplehood may be artificially constructed in response to immediate need or it may be ancient and organic growing over time it has the potential to cut across race class and gender its central tenets and myths may be reinterpreted recreated enlarged upon or modified as the political situation warrants flexibility of belief and the need to identify with a larger group account both for the durability of ethnic loyalty and its vulnerability to manipulation this volume is particularly timely at a moment when national governments in many parts of the world must face the adoption of more equitable forms of rule to hold their ethnically diverse societies together taken together the analyses presented here warn against institutionalizing ethnic strife and offer a vision of how the state may foster expectations and policies that serve the interests of all ethnic groups within their borders political scientists historians and anthropologists will find this book valuable for its interpretations of forces that continue to reshape the social and political fabric of the world the book provides empirically rich case studies of the lives and livelihoods of marginalised ethnic minorities in colonial and post colonial zimbabwe with a specific focus on diverse rural areas it demonstrates the dynamic and complex relationships existing between ethnic minorities and livelihoods and analyses the ways in which projects of belonging and identity formation amongst these ethnic minorities are entangled in their respective livelihood construction projects and vice versa the ethnic minorities include those considered indigenous to zimbabwe and those often defined as aliens including ethnicities with a transnational presence in southern africa the ethnicities studied in the book include the following chewa doma tonga tshwa san shangane basotho ndau hlangwe and nambya by studying their livelihoods in particular this book offers the first full manuscript about ethnic minorities in zimbabwe in doing so it highlights the significance of these ethnic minorities to zimbabwean history politics and society
