we likely have a dark side but there s also a process that might help us work through that part of ourself it s called shadow work and involves diving into the unconscious material that shapes our thoughts emotions and behaviors the goal is to make those unconscious fixations such as the pain of a traumatic event part of our conscious awareness so that we can then work on them in therapy those unconscious aspects which are responsible for our impulsive behaviors and a part of our so called dark side can result from painful experiences trauma and past memories dealing with our past is necessary for healing we must form a new relationship with some of the unlikeable unreasonable wounded parts of our psyche in order to integrate new patterns into our lives this is where shadow work comes into play the shadow self is a side that we may have learned to suppress as a child for instance if we were scolded for throwing a tantrum we may have stored that anger away and put on a more socially acceptable smiling face for the world we were taught early on that being angry was undesirable this anger as well as rage jealousy greed and selfishness are feelings that everyone has but not everyone is comfortable expressing them these suppressed emotions or characteristics are a part of our shadow personality shadow work is all about the unconscious mind which consists of the things that we repress and hide from ourselves such as traumas and shadow personalities our shadow self might show up when we are triggered in our relationships and through varying levels of anxiety and depression and when this seemingly dark side does rise up it might reveal that something about our personality that is worth a closer look anyone can do shadow work though it is best started with a therapist many people may choose to undergo shadow work on their own and in both cases this gorgeous beginner's book of shadows is a complementary tool fundamental for your ongoing healing shadow work process if we remember that there are many people who understand nothing at all about themselves we shall be less surprised at the realization that there are also people who are utterly unaware of their actual conflicts everyone carries a shadow and the less it is embodied in the individual's conscious life the blacker and denser it is if an inferiority is conscious one always has a chance to correct it carl gustav jung
