declining commodity prices during mid 2014 2016 posed significant challenges to commodity exporting economies the severe terms of trade shock associated with a sharp fall in world commodity prices have raised anew questions about the viability of pegged exchange rate regimes more recently the covid 19 pandemic and the measures needed to contain its spread have been associated with a significant disruption in several economic sectors in particular travel tourism and hospitality industry adding to the downward pressure on commodity prices a sharp fall in foreign exchange earnings and depressed economic activity in most commodity exporters this paper reviews country experiences with different exchange rate regimes in coping with commodity price shocks and explores the role of flexible exchange rates as a shock absorber analyzing the macroeconomic impact of adverse term of trade shocks under different regimes using event study and panel vector autoregression techniques it also analyzes conceptually and empirically policy and technical considerations in making exchange rate regime choices and discusses the supporting policies that should accompany a given regime choice to make that choice sustainable it offers lessons that could be helpful to the caribbean commodity exporters
