this paper investigates the dynamic impact of natural resource discoveries on government debt sustainability we use a natural experiment framework in which the timing of discoveries is treated as an exogenous source of within country variation we combine data on government debt fiscal stress and debt distress episodes on a large panel of countries over 1970 2012 with a global repository of giant oil gas and mineral discoveries we find strong and robust evidence of a fiscal presource curse i e natural resources can jeopardize fiscal sustainability even before the first drop of oil is pumped specifically we find that giant discoveries mostly of oil and gas lead to permanently higher government debt and eventually debt distress episodes specially in countries with weaker political institutions and governance this evidence suggest that the curse can be mitigated and even prevented by pursuing prudent fiscal policies and borrowing strategies strengthening fiscal governance and implementing transparent and robust fiscal frameworks for resource management
