if the truth were told this volume and its direct antecedents must rank among the most ambitious if not simply pretentious endeavors imaginable at least in the social sciences the titles of the volume and the chapters promising to integrate the experiences of the sense of justice and the affectional bonding of people in close relations seem straightforward and reasonable enough what they fail to convey however is the simple bald fact that we in the human social sciences have no firm grasp on either of these two fundamental experiences what we sometimes call love and justice to begin with even as scientists committed to understanding based upon systematic propositions linking publicly observable concepts we have no clear consensus concerning the nature of the affective bonds linking people in close relationships love intimacy caring mutual responsiveness or the sense of justice fairness deserving and in our efforts to understand entitlement and we are continually handicapped stand these complex moving experiences by the persistent tendency to reduce them to manifestations of nothing but familiar psychological or even biological processes secondary rewards selfish genes so why then this volume although there are many answers to the question probably the most germane is that the basic issues are so important and intriguing that the recent past has seen rather dramatic parallel growth in social scientists interest in these two areas justice and close relationships many desire an emotionally intimate relationship and yet react to the prospect by pulling away they do this to obscure their true selves for one of two reasons they fear rejection if they are to honestly reveal themselves to another or it may be because of a foreboding sense that their identity will be taken away if they truly open up to another in either case by pulling away they make themselves seem aloof and guarded and that makes rejection all the more likely when it happens their conviction that intimacy is not possible for them is reinforced for those caught in this web or for those who know people who are author jill p weber phd a clinical psychologist explains why a capacity for intimacy is not a fixed quality but a skill to be developed and refined this book is the fourth in her relationship formula workbook series weber shows how with practice it is possible to foster fulfilling relationships not only with romantic partners but with family members friends and coworkers she draws on years of experience in her practice to layout doable strategies that fundamentally change an individual's ability to find genuine emotional rapport
