eighty miles off the libyan coast water is leaking rapidly into the bottom of a dilapidated wooden boat twenty seven men crammed in side by side desperately attempt to bail it out but the boat is sinking in the distance one of their number spots a ship and forcing the last moments of life from the engine they move towards it but the crew refuses to allow them on board instead the men scramble onto the floats of a huge industrial tuna net and watch as their boat rolls over and disappears into the heaving mediterranean like tens of thousands of others justice set off from his rural village with an idealised vision of a new life in england the home country desperate just to earn his way and help his orphaned brother and sister left behind during his long journey to the african coast he's captured jailed and tortured before escaping and heading northwards again once in tripoli he's duped into handing over his life savings for a trip in a wreck of a boat across miles of open sea to almost certain death but there is also compassion here and he meets old and wise souls along the way the tuna net is not the end of justice's story it is an extraordinary tale of courage and an important account of a life caught between cultures on the edge of survival everybody wants freedom every nation wants freedom every organisation wants freedom the press wants freedom from the garden of eden to the present day the quest for freedom continues unabated yet no one has been able to define what freedom really is that makes freedom subjective to individual or societal perception the british press one of the freest and most powerful in the world has its own perception of freedom and when professed press freedom colludes with perceived society freedom in the climate of political correctness there can only be one result the result is what this book is all about and makes it a must read book for everyone because the british media has the power to influence and alter your perception we know that today s world thrives on information and the speed of information flow is what makes today s world a global village the british media has been at the forefront of global information and has its tentacles spread all over the world however its world view is solely a reflection of british society thus a globalised world is cocooned into british societal values and norms so somehow you are affected by the freedom experiment originating from britain
