in 2013 a dutch scientist unveiled the world s first laboratory created hamburger since then the idea of producing meat not from live animals but from carefully cultured tissues has spread like wildfire through the media meanwhile cultured meat researchers race against population growth and climate change in an effort to make sustainable protein meat planet explores the quest to generate meat in the lab a substance sometimes called cultured meat and asks what it means to imagine that this is the future of food neither an advocate nor a critic of cultured meat benjamin aldes wurgaf spent five years researching the phenomenon in meat planet he reveals how debates about lab grown meat reach beyond debates about food examining the links between appetite growth and capitalism could satiating the growing appetite for meat actually lead to our undoing are we simply using one technology to undo the damage caused by another like all problems in our food system the meat problem is not merely a problem of production it is intrinsically social and political and it demands that we examine questions of justice and desirable modes of living in a shared and finite world benjamin wurgaf tells a story that could utterly transform the way we think of animals the way we relate to farmland the way we use water and the way we think about population and our fragile ecosystem s capacity to sustain life he argues that even if cultured meat does not succeed it functions much like science fiction as a crucial mirror that we can hold up to our contemporary fleshy dysfunctions a provocative argument that eating meat is not what made humans human and that the future is not necessarily carnivorous humans are eating more meat than ever despite ubiquitous sweetgreen franchises and the example set by celebrity vegans demand for meat is projected to grow at twice the rate of demand for plant based foods over the next thirty years between 1960 and 2010 per capita meat consumption in the developing world more than doubled in china meat consumption grew ninefold it has even been claimed that meat made us human that our disproportionately large human brains evolved because our early human ancestors ate meat in the meat question josh berson argues that not only did meat not make us human but the contemporary increase in demand for meat is driven as much by economic insecurity as by affluence considering the full sweep of meat s history berson concludes provocatively that the future is not necessarily carnivorous berson an anthropologist and historian argues that we have the relationship between biology and capitalism backward we may associate meat eating with wealth but in fact meat eating is a sign of poverty cheap meat hunger killing easy to prepare eaten on the go enables a capitalism defined by inequality to answer the meat question says berson we need to think about meat eating in a way that goes beyond paleo diets and peta protests to address the deeply entwined economic and political lives of humans and animals past present and future
