engaging children and young people in planning places planners skills for engagement with children and young people centre stage by discussing several projects delivered or supported by planning students to young people in the northeast of England. Urban or town and country planning is a largely unfamiliar concept to children and young people. Moreover, in England, the environment in which young people live, play and go to school is shaped by a local planning process which lacks their input. This book explores the nature of the gap between that planning process and the voice of the younger members of the community as well as the barriers that impede this engagement. It highlights why an engagement process is beneficial for those young people, for the wider community and for the planning process itself at a time when our relationship with and impact on the environment is being re-examined. This book challenges the planning professional to identify, develop and reflect upon the engagement skills that will help to transform planning into a more inclusive practice. It will be of use to scholars and practitioners in urban planning, community planning, engagement and children's rights whilst supporting their academic and professional development pathways.

Urban and regional planning programs aspire to prepare practitioners to write and implement comprehensive plans, yet academic planning programs often place greater emphasis on theory than practice. To help address this gap, Fundamentals of Planning gives planning students an understanding of research and methods of analysis that apply to comprehensive planning. Its informative text and examples will help students develop familiarity with various data sources and acquire the knowledge and ability to conduct basic planning analyses such as population projections, housing needs assessments, development impact analyses and land use plans. Students will also learn how to implement the various citizen participation methods used by planners and develop an appreciation of the values and roles of practicing planners. In this revised second edition, Edward Jenson and Jerry Weitz bring their extensive experience as practicing planners and teaching faculty to give planning students the practical, hands-on tools they need to create and implement real plans and policies. With an entirely new census data set, expanded discussions of sustainability and other topics as well as new online resources including a companion website, the book is now more accessible and more informative. Its updated chapters on transportation, housing, environment, economic development and other core planning elements also make it a handy reference for planning practitioners.

This book evaluates the effectiveness of the Green Belt planning policy in England. It is one of the most well known strategies internationally with similar growth restraint policies having been adopted in a diverse range of cities around the world such as portland medellin and bangkok despite this it is often argued that green belts contribute to wider inequitable outcomes in society focusing on the green belt in england the book critically analyses the extent to which these policies and planning systems contribute to housing crises and examines how far they need to be reformed with the central role of community engagement in many of the debates about housing crises the book investigates the characteristics of popular and campaigner opposition to housebuilding alongside investigating the power relations and politics of planning systems this timely research taps into important current policy debates in the uk surrounding urban nature green infrastructure and building on the grey belt the book is therefore of relevance and benefit to policymakers and politicians to academics and students internationally from a range of fields interested in housing community engagement green infrastructure strategic planning power and politics and conservation
