this is a work of fundamental importance for our understanding of the intellectual and cultural history of early modern europe stuart clark offers a new interpretation of the witchcraft beliefs of european intellectuals based on their publications in the field of demonology and shows how these beliefs fitted rationally with many other views current in europe between the fifteenth and eighteenth centuries professor clark is the first to explore the appeal of demonology to early modern intellectuals by looking at the books they published on the subject during this period after examining the linguistic foundations of their writings the author shows how the writers ideas about witchcraft and about magic complemented their other intellectual commitments in particular their conceptions of nature history religion and politics the result is much more than a history of demonology it is a survey of wider intellectual and ideological purposes and underlines just how far the nature of rationality is dependent on its historical context it was during the late middle ages that the full stereotype of demonic witchcraft developed in europe and this is the subject of this volume which places the dominican theologian johannes nider at the centre of an emerging set of beliefs about diabolical sorcery and witchcraft in the 15th century
