this book is for researchers and students interested in exploring how speakers and writers construe meaning through discourse it draws on tools for discourse analysis developed in systemic functional linguistics and register and genre theory but requires no prior knowledge of functional linguistics avoiding academic complexity wherever possible rather it builds a highly accessible set of analytic tools that can be used with ease by workers from a range of disciplines including educational research critical discourse analysis cultural studies text linguistics and language and literacy teaching this book explores the cognitive constraints and principles of variation in structures of linguistic meaning across languages it unifies cognitive semantic representations with formal semantic representations to make a unique contribution to the study of typological generalizations and universals in natural language semantics this unified approach not only helps reveal why semantic structures have the observed variation they have but also sheds light on the compelling cognitive and formal regularities and patterns in the variation of linguistic semantics the book also advances the general principles of a cognitively oriented semantic typology lucid and topical the book will be an indispensable resource for students and researchers of language typology linguistics cognitive linguistics and semantics it will also be of interest to theoretical linguists of both cognitivist and formalist schools the ultimate goal of computational linguistics is to teach the computer to understand natural language this research monograph presents a description of english according to algorithms which can be programmed into a computer to analyse natural language texts the algorithmic approach uses series of instructions written in natural language and organised in flow charts with the aim of analysing certain aspects of the grammar of a sentence one problem with text processing is the difficulty in distinguishing word forms that belong to parts of speech taken out of context in order to solve this problem hristo georgiev starts with the assumption that every word is either a verb or a non verb from here he presents an algorithm which allows the computer to recognise parts of speech which to a human would be obvious though the meaning of the words emphasis for a computer is placed on verbs nouns participles and adjectives english algorithmic grammar presents information for computers to recognise tenses syntax parsing reference and clauses the final chapters of the book examine the further applications of an algorithmic approach to english grammar and suggests ways in which the computer can be programmed to recognise meaning this is an innovative cutting edge approach to computational linguistics that will be essential reading for academics researching computational linguistics machine translation and natural language processing satisfiability sat related topics have attracted researchers from various disciplines logic applied areas such as planning scheduling operations research and combinatorial optimization but also theoretical issues on the theme of complexity and much more they all are connected through sat my personal interest in sat stems from actual solving the increase in power of modern sat solvers over the past 15 years has been phenomenal it has become the key enabling technology in automated verification of both computer hardware and software bounded model checking bmc of computer hardware is now probably the most widely used model checking technique the counterexamples that it finds are just satisfying instances of a boolean formula obtained by unwinding to some fixed depth a sequential circuit and its specification in linear temporal logic extending model checking to software verification is a much more difficult problem on the frontier of current research one promising approach for languages like c with finite word length integers is to use the same idea as in bmc but with a decision procedure for the theory of bit vectors instead of sat all decision procedures for bit vectors that i am familiar with ultimately make use of a fast sat solver to handle complex formulas decision procedures for more complicated theories like linear real and integer arithmetic are also used in program verification most of them use powerful sat solvers in an essential way clearly efficient sat solving is a key technology for 21st century computer science i expect this collection of papers on all theoretical and practical aspects of sat solving will be extremely useful to both students and researchers and will lead to many further advances in the field edmund clarke fore systems university professor of computer science and professor of electrical and computer engineering at carnegie mellon university winner of the 2007 a m turing award
